

CARRANZA'S GOVERNMENT DISGRUNTLED

WOULD WELCOME RETURN OF U. S. TROOPS TO AMERICAN SOIL, WASHINGTON LEARNS.

NO WORD FROM CAVALRY

Pursuit of Villa Takes Col. Dodd's Contingent Well Beyond Limit of Communication—Are Near Calevo.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

El Paso, April 6.—Indications in Washington that the Carranza government might soon indicate to the government that the troops pursuing Villa were following a "cold trail," and that the de facto government would welcome the return of the United States' troops to their own country, occasioned no surprise today. El Paso.

Embarrassing to Carranza.

There have been insistent reports here that the de facto government looked with no favoring eyes on further pursuit of Villa, and that the presence of American troops in Mexico was proving an embarrassment to Carranzistas. These reports were not confirmable, because the Mexican officials both here and in Juarez said matters of diplomatic nature must be considered by the government heads at Queretaro.

Army officers here say that while the difficulties of the Villa hunt increase daily, and that it may be weeks before he is captured, the pursuit of Villa has continued until the word comes from Washington to withdraw the troops.

Twenty Apache Indian scouts passed through here early today enroute to the front, where they will try to pick up Villa's trail.

The Apaches made an unbroken ride of sixty miles from Fort Apache to Holbrook, Arizona, and then did a war dance before taking the train.

Candy For Soldiers.

The sweet tooth developed by the American expeditionary force in Mexico is to be gratified.

The quartermaster's department here today received from field quartermaster, at Casas, a regiment for 2000 pounds of chocolate candy and 3000 pounds of sugar candy. Candy is not a luxury in the army as a luxury, but as a food which will be doubly appreciated by the hard riding troopers after days and days of subsistence on nothing but hard tack and bacon.

Cavalry Unheard From.

The most advanced cavalry detachments engaged in running down Villa, were beyond communication today, and at General Funston's headquarters it was believed they already were as far south as Calevo, from where trails extend toward Parral.

Only unofficial and conflicting reports as to Villa's whereabouts have been received here, but Funston and his staff officers pledge more credence in the reports that he was near Calevo today and traveling south or southwest.

Indians Act As Guides.

Columbus, N. M., April 6.—Clad in knaki and leather uniforms of American cavalry men, twenty Apache Indians were preparing here today to start for the headquarters of General Pershing, where they will act as scouts and trailers in combating the mountains of Guerrers for Villa.

Thirty years ago, April 6, a party of Indians in war paint and blankets, fought against the American troops of which General Pershing was then a second lieutenant in Geronimo's camp in the same district.

Captain O. P. M. Hazard, who arrived with the scouts from Fort Apache, Arizona, asserted they would have for the front as soon as their ponies can be unloaded.

"We are going to bring Villa back," said M. Jesse Valesquez, interviewer for the party. "Our men were pledged to do a great war dance the first for years—and they cannot go back on their word. These men are man-hunters who can follow a trail on broken twigs and disturbed dust as readily as you can read a printed page."

Valesquez said the warrior donned war paint and danced throughout the night before they left and then with a sleep, rode horseback the sixty miles to the nearest railroad station.

Recruits. April 6.—General Funston today asked the war department to send the recruits enlisted under the recent authorization of 20,000 additional men to Brownsville, Texas, for distribution among the border patrols. The recruits are being assembled and drilled at recruiting stations at Jefferson Barracks, Ohio; Fort Logan, Colorado; and Fort Alvarado, California.

"They will not be sent across the border, but will fill up regiments of border guards.

At General Funston's request, a battery of the fourth field artillery, which has been ordered from Brownsville to the Panama canal zone, will remain on the border in view of the Mexican conditions.

Little News Available.

El Paso, April 6.—The entire Mexican situation was veiled in obscurity today. But the last three days not a single Mexican or American has arrived here from the interior and the scanty news given out by Mexican officials at Juarez threw no light on operations of troops pursuing Villa, beyond confirming the impression the chase has been practically halted at least temporarily.

Army officers here show no hesitancy in expressing their opinion that to attempt to pursue Villa farther, without the aid of the railroads, is almost a hopeless task.

Diplomatic Aspect Again.

Washington, April 6.—Attention of administration officials was focused today on diplomatic aspects of the American expedition into Mexico.

In some quarters there was a strong inclination to connect the de facto government with the delay in permitting the use of railroads for shipment of supplies to the United States forces with a desire of General Carranza to have the American soldiers leave Mexican soil.

Attack on Belgium.

His words in this latter connection are interpreted as an affirmation that Germany would not evacuate the country where the blood of persons has been shed without receiving the necessary guarantees regarding its future, and that the "new Belgium" will include a special disposition for the "Flemish" portion of the kingdom, a hint of the nature of which is regarded as being given by the chancellor's use of the word "Netherlandish."

ROCK COUNTY FARM INCOMES COMPARED

SMALL TRACT CAPABLY HANDLED YIELDS LARGER INCOME THAN ONE FOUR TIMES LARGER.

MANAGEMENT LESSON

Gives a striking example of what scientific and businesslike administration will do for agriculture.

At the recent Rock county farm management meeting statistics of two Rock county farmers were compared for the purpose of finding out where one farm was weak and the other strong. They were designated as Farmer A and Farmer B. Both farms were located near markets, both sell cream to the creamery, both have fertile, well-drained soils.

Farm A is a small farm of only forty acres, but farm B has four times that number or one hundred sixty acres, but only half of which is under cultivation. Farm A is practically all under cultivation, but even then it has only 15% more in crops than Farm B. From the crops farm A received an income of $45, while farm B, with only twice as much land in crops, received twice as much in income, or a trifle more than ten times as much for the crops or $422.

From poultry and eggs farm A received an income of $65 and farm B, $108. In spite of these facts, however, the smaller farm makes the most profit, for its gain in investment is $200, while farm B lost $82. Farm A after paying 5% on its investment received $760 less either in money or increased inventory, and farm B, lacked $83 of money or 5% on its investment. Farm A, then had the advantage over farm B, by $1,563. It paid 9.5% on its investment and farm B paid only 2.4% on its capital invested. These figures are not to be taken as an average of the banks the receipts and expenses for the year. Any increase in inventory was counted in the receipts. In each case also the 5% interest is reckoned on the investment and deducted from the receipts before the balance is struck to determine the loss or gain for the year. All labor is charged against the farm whether it is hired out or not, except it is done by some member of the family, and no account is made of the farm and garden produce consumed in the family.

To find how the different comes about we turn to the tables of receipts and expenses, or as they are called, incomes and disbursements. The income is as follows:

Farm A.	Farm B.
Crops	$45.00
Corn	30.00
Cattle	77.00
Hogs	63.00
Poultry and eggs	65.00
Miscellaneous	71.00
	4.00

This shows an income in favor of Farm A of $215. That does not account for all the difference between the farms so we must turn to the disbursements:

Farm A.	Farm B.
Taxes & insurance	$32.00
Feed purchased	76.00
Labor	66.00
Seed and supplies	14.00
Repairs	56.00
Miscellaneous	23.00
Total running expenses	$317.00
Int. charge at 5%	$385.00
	157.00

$155.00 $250.00

A study of this table shows us that it costs three times as much to run the larger farm as the smaller one. This is to be expected. But the item that presents the greatest contrast is that of feed. Farm A spent $76 for feed; farm B, $341, a difference of $265. If we turn back now to the table of incomes we will find what returns each received from this investment. In fact these returns come under cream, cattle and hogs. From this source Farm A received $1,724 and farm B, $1,080, a difference of $654 in favor of Farm A. In other words, from an investment of $76 in feed Farm A gets $7.24, and Farm B, with an investment of $341, a difference of $265. This leads naturally to a study of the stock and the feed on the two farms. The statistics which were given do not show the number of hogs on either farm, but show, however, that the hogs on Farm A were valued at $100 and those on Farm B at $150; also that those on Farm A brought an income of only $63 and those of Farm B, an income of $310, which is much in favor of Farm B, so if we eliminate the hogs we find that Farm A made $31 more than Farm B on the dairy cattle, which, curiously enough, is almost exactly the same lost on Farm B. Did the smaller farm then support more cows than the larger? We turn to the record under distribution of operating capital and find these items:

Farm A.	Farm B.
1 bull	$200
1 bull	1 bull
12 cows	1800
Young stock	400
stock	325

It is not then the number of cattle kept, but the quality that enabled Farm A to get the same amount of feed as Farm B, for here is black and white against the records. From herds of practically the same size one farm receives $1,671.00 and the other $720.

Now as to crops: Farm A raises alfalfa hay and corn silage. Farm B raises corn, small grain, clover and timothy hay and tobacco. The crops raised explain why Farm A had a feed bill, for corn silage and alfalfa form a good mixture. Farm B provided in its rations so little of nitrogenous matter that it was necessary to buy it. It also failed to provide sufficient feed, which is necessary for good milk production throughout the year.

These two farms are good examples of the results to be obtained by general farming and specialized farming. Farm A, bends all its energies to dairying, from which it received all but $244 of its income. Farm B, generalized, getting its income from tobacco and hogs, and evidently making no one thing a specialty.

On Farm B the capital is not invested in such a way as to bring returns, only one-half the farm being in crops. The land is worth $123 per acre, but the operating capital is so small, being only 11%, that the farm pays only 2.4% on the investment. On Farm B, every acre is bringing returns, the operating capital being 2.7% of the entire investment and bringing in 9.5%.

Farm A has a larger number of cows to the acre and better cows. The herd on Farm A is headed by a good size. The herd on Farm B is headed by a scrub. Farm A raises alfalfa and corn silages. Farm B sells tobacco and buys feed.

This comparison is not made to disparage any farm. It is not possible for every farm to make as good a showing each year as that made by farm A, especially when the year is as unfavorable as last year. It is for the purpose of pointing out certain things that make for success and failure in Rock county and the conclusion is that which has been pointed out before. Some of the large factors in the success of farms in this county are good cows, good bulls, alfalfa and silage.

CALVES IN CONTEST MAKING BIG GAINS

Monthly Reports in Rock County Calf Feeding Contest Show Astonishing Results Obtained.

Two months of the Rock county calf feeding contest have passed and now the forty entrants are receiving some of the best and high record gains from feeding their young stock. L. A. Markham, field secretary of the contest has received most of the March reports and some very pleasing results are shown. The reports from Rock Prairie and Clinton have been the most prompt in coming in. In these sections and also in Milton some of the largest gains have been found.

The highest gain for the month of March has been eighty-one pounds. This result is the highest received so far in the contest. Although this gain is very large, the boy owning the calf will be marked down in points as the cost was nine dollars and seventeen cents. This includes every that the animal has eaten from March first to April first.

Since other records received were even better this is high one. Two brothers in the town of Milton have two calves that gained seventy-one and seventy-two pounds respectively. The one gaining 73 pounds cost only two dollars and the other one, one dollar and sixty-three cents. Another boy in Rock Prairie has done very well, having gained seventy-nine pounds. This result is the highest received so far in the contest. Although this gain is large, the boy owning the calf will be marked down in points as the cost was nine dollars and seventeen cents. This includes every that the animal has eaten from March first to April first.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE OF CHURCHES CLOSES; ST. PATRICKS CHAMPS

Last of Church Contests is Played Tuesday Evening—St. Patrick's Win Cup—Methodists In Second Place.

Tuesday night marked the close of the Janesville church basketball league which has conducted games during the past winter at the high school. Two contests were scheduled to be played Tuesday evening, but only the Methodists and St. Patrick's clashed. The victory of the Methodists over the Catholic five put them on a tie with that team. As the dops stands now both of these teams have won four and lost two games.

The Presbyterians should have played the Baptists this week, but on account of the illness of some of their players they forfeited. This put them at the last of the list and the Baptists stand in fifth place.

Title to St. Patrick's.

The St. Patrick's church team topped the honors for the league by going through their schedule without a defeat. Six games are on their list and no defeats giving them a percentage of one thousand. The Methodists follow second with a percentage of sixty-six, having won four out of the six games. The third was picked as the winners at the first of the season and until they struck the St. Patrick's aggregation their hopes for winning the cup were thought to be a sure thing. The St. Mary's also had a good chance at the honors, but when they were defeated by the champs they were shattered.

The last year winners finished in the fourth position with a tie of three victories and three defeats. Their line-up of last year was taken up considerably when Lee, a star forward, landed a berth on the high school team, which disqualifies him for the church "squad." Green, too, another good player, left the city and that left one of the guard positions open. Their team this year showed the lack of practice and had they been better organized they would have probably run close to the St. Patrick's.

Much Interest.

The attendance at the games has been very large and the spirit shown was always surprising. Possibly a banquet of all the teams participating in the league this year will be arranged for the near future. At this occasion a program will be given and the champions of the league will be presented with the large silver loving cup.

Following is the final standing of the teams in the church basketball league:

St. Mary's	4	2	.666

LAKOTAS EXPECTING VICTORY SATURDAY

Fogarty-Young With Their Stars To Give Janesville Club Merry Battle in Coming Game.

A victory for the team of Fogarty in the game to be played at the auditorium Saturday night is the most important ambition that the Lakota Cardinals, as a team, have at the present time. As the series between the two teams stands even, each having one game, the importance on the third and deciding game is evident. The Lakotas won the first game by six points and dropped the second one on March 11th by three points.

At the time the Lakotas had to out-score Fogarty's attack team by so far a margin that they could not be sure over the count, and which is the better team. Both teams are keen rivals and on the basketball court there is never any kind feelings exhibited between them. Fogarty will have the same team that beat the Janesville team to be composed of Stegeman or Whittle, center; Fogarty, Stegeman or Whittle, forwards; Murphy and Young, guards. That aggregation is hard to beat for they are all high class basketball athletes.

Janesville basketball fans will be satisfied if the Lakota regulars, Herring, center; Korst and Atwood, forwards; Edler and Dalton, guards, play. If this team gets beat by the Rockford stars, they are willing to admit defeat and surrender the title claims. Possibly the Lakotas will be strengthened, but in the opinion of many of the fans, the full team can beat the Lakotas. It would be a foolish mistake to shift Edler to forward from guard. Huss is another university player may take Korst's place as this player is not in the best of condition to play such a grueling game because of a weak shoulder.

The game to be played Saturday has got to be played cleaner than the last contest. Both teams violated the rules frequently and it marred the game.

It would be hard to find a player who delighted roughing and in questionable tactics more than Fogarty and Referees Langdon should see to it that the rivalry between the two teams is confined to hard playing instead of satisfying personal grudges.

DON'T WANT FOOTBALL MEN TO WORK IN HARVEST FIELD.

Lawrence, Kan., April 6.—Coach Herman O'leary of the University of Kansas football team has issued a warning against football men dedicated working in the harvest fields of Kansas this year. "This sort of summer training is one of the worst things a player can do," said Coach O'leary. "When he reports for practice in the fall, he is stiff-muscled and usually under weight. Let the boys stay out of the harvest fields if they can."

Last season was the first for Coach O'leary, while the middle west athlete in the middle west, where wheat grows plentifully. In the spring he heard a great deal of the wonderful benefits derived by athletes who became hardened pitching straw but after one experience with players who have harvest field trained I am satisfied it is not good," he said.

PIRATES ARE WEAK TEAM IN NATIONAL

Callahan Will Have Mighty Big Job to Boost Pittsburgh Out of Sec. and Division.

[EXCERPT TO THE GAZETTE]

Pittsburgh, April 6.—The 1916 Pirates look weaker than any gang that Barney Dreyfuss ever sent into a 154-game scrum.

With the lion hearted Jimmy Callahan handling the reins, the Pirates may surprise the baseball world by finishing in the first division—but that wouldn't be merely a surprise—it would be a distinct shock.

The Pittsburgh outlook is gloomy in the extreme. The club is shy in collecting power, it is only ordinary in fielding skill and its head staff is not of the kind which can labor under such handicaps and still gather in a sizeable collection of victories.

The aged Honus will be back at short. He still can field and throw but he can't cover the ground that he did when in his prime. Added years have stolen the speed from his legs, steering pedals and dimmed the brilliant crib lights so brightly for nearly a decade. But, even at that, Honus probably will be the main cog in the Pirate infield.

Doc Johnson, the first basing person, is a reliable fielder—but he is not a marvel. Nor is he a clouter. He whanged 'em for .265 last year.

It's his average power. Jimmy Viox may be back at second—or he may go to the outfield. It all depends upon what Jimmy Smith does.

Smith has been a lightning rod for many years, has had a chance with the Chicago Feds last year. He's as fast as a lightning streak and a sensational fielder. But the Feds found him a bit too young and weak at bat. He may have a batting eye and a little steadiness since last summer. If so, he will be the second sack guardian and Viox will assume an outfielding role.

Callahan's big job is to develop a third base coach. The 1916 regulars are little more than mediocre.

There are several youngsters who are going to try for the job and it would be surprising if Baird was nosed out.

Hinchman is certain of one of the gardening places. He's a good batter, although slow on the paths. Viox ought to land a job there, too, if he can't get to second. Max Smith has been a Pirate out fielder for many years, has had a good up considerably and is not a really valuable player. But despite this he has a regular job because the Pirates do not seem to have anyone on the roster who is better. Barney, a regular last year, is a fair fielder, but weak with the stick.

The catching department this year ought to be stronger than in 1915 through the purchase of Art Williams from the Cubs. He's a fine receiver and head of the team, has a good arm and can bat. Gibson, the veteran, is about through.

Mammax performed brilliantly in the box last year. He was the sensation of the league. With a weak club behind him he won twenty-one out of twenty-nine games, finishing just behind Grover Alexander in winning percentage and third in effectiveness. Mammax may perform as well this year.

One great pitcher, however, cannot keep a bad club in the race—or can he keep it in final division? Mammax must have help. But it seems unlikely that he'll get it. Harmon is a fair pitcher Adams is skidding and Cooper never has been nor ever will be a wonder. Some of the rookies may rise up and do heroic work—and, then, again they may not. Seventh place belongs to the Pirates, according to the mid-winter dope.

New York, April 6.—The ten-round bout between Charlie Weinert and Porky Flynn at the Broadway Sporting club came to an abrupt end more than a minute ahead of scheduled time and never will be finished. Weinert, weighing Flynn backward, struck against the ropes with such force that the top was torn from a corner fastening. Flynn fell backward, head foremost, into the laps of several writers, while Weinert turned a complete somersault. Neither was injured, but the referee halted hostilities right there. Weinert had outpointed Flynn up to the time of the accident.

The United States army team, which made a creditable showing in Chicago semi-pro circles, will try to open the season April 16 if Lieut. Kenney and his men are not too busy signing up recruits. Lieut. Kenney is the chief recruiting officer of the Chicago district, and most of his ball players are detailed at recruiting stations.

Detroit is said to have uncovered a recruit who is playing Cobb-like speed, a Sam Crawford wallop with the bat and a regular Veach throwing arm. The date of his return to the minors will be announced later.

SUGGESTIONS.

Now that the city political campaign is over it is time for the voters to get together and to boast for a bigger and better Janesville. Talk of revenge in the shape of a recall of a certain city official should be given its quietus before it is even given breath.

It has been a strenuous contest but what would a political fight amount to if all were of the same opinion and viewed life through the same pair of glasses. The battle is over and there should be no sore places left, no talk of reprisals, and harmony should prevail.

Just at present the Builders' Exchange members are hard at work on the construction of a new factory building for the Janesville Tractor company. It is an addition of a new industry to those already established here and its development will mean much for the growth and prosperity of the city as a whole. It is truly a community idea that is being worked out and should be encouraged.

The Commercial club is about to close its whirlwind campaign for the bringing to the city one of the branch factories of the Gossard company which will give employment to a large number of men and women. The list of contributors to the cause is not confined to the more prosperous citizens but even to the working class who are contributing their dollars and half dollars that the desired end may be obtained.

It has been decided to hold a Fourth of July celebration this year, one that will make the surrounding country sit up and take notice, of a combination of the Commercial club, the Retail Liquor Dealers' association and every organization in the city working in perfect harmony. The plans that have been discussed include many new features that will attract and amuse large crowds of visitors.

In August comes the Janesville Fair. This under the auspices of the Janesville Park association has become an established county institution and has attracted attention throughout the state for the excellence of its exhibits of fine stock and fast horses. To make it more successful a Home Coming week is being discussed.

These are some of the reasons for a united front of citizens generally with all petty quarrels put aside and politics forgotten that Janesville may present a solid line of boosters to the thousands of visitors who will be attracted here during the coming summer months by the various industrial activities and the amusement features. This is merely a suggestion, but stop and think it over and see if it does not meet your approval.

TOO GOOD NEWS.

Really the news political throughout the state that the La Follette element headed by the senior senator and presidential aspirant, has met with a stinging rebuke at the hands of the voters in the selection of delegates to represent Badgerdom at the national republican convention seems too good to be true.

It would not have been possible four years ago but in the past two years the eyes of the voters have been opened to much that had been hidden in state management and under the regime of Governor Philipp they have come to realize that the wave of ultra-progressivism has been a costly playing that will take years to eradicate its evil influences.

Headed by Governor Philipp the Wisconsin delegation will go to the Chicago convention unpledged for any candidate to take part in the deliberations of that august assemblage to select a candidate for president to be voted for at the November election. That they will make a wise selection is most certain and they will not be biased by any iron-bound pledge to vote for a candidate who has no more chance than the proverbial snowball merely from sentimental reasons.

All hail to the Wisconsin republicans who are slowly but surely releasing themselves from the bondage of "reform" by casting ballots with judgment and in their own interests unmindful of the shouts of the dying political gladiators who seek to lead them to follow false gods.

BRYAN-CLARK-WILSON.

Friends of President Wilson are trying to extract a large measure of comfort from William J. Bryan's declaration that he is for Mr. Wilson's nomination and they doubtless could do so but for the haunting recollection of Speaker Champ Clark's oft-repeated prediction regarding the 1916 convention. "If there is a prospect of democratic victory in 1916," Mr. Clark has said, "Woodrow Wilson will deserve the nomination and no one can take it from him. But if there is a prospect of democratic defeat Woodrow Wilson must take the nomination because no one will take it from him." As the democratic national convention approaches there is an ominous harmony regarding the re-nomination of Mr. Wilson. There have been many mutterings and some evidences that Mr. Wilson might be opposed by both Bryan and Clark, but all that is passed and instead both of these statesmen appear to be so willing that Mr. Wilson should be re-nominated that some of his closest friends and well-wishers are wondering if it is not a case of "no one will take it from him." Mr. Clark's sage prediction, therefore, constitutes a large-sized fly in the Wilson ointment.

FIRE HAZARDS.

Insurance men are saying much nowadays about fire hazards. In a good many cities efforts are being made to promote fireproof construction. Campaigns are noted in many places to have use of wooden shingles stopped. The losses by fire are great, and people are thoughtless about these matters. Every man who puts up a building this spring should consider if his construction is going to add to the fire peril of his home town.

There is a growing tendency to put wooden buildings too closely together. As towns increase, land costs more, lots are cut up smaller, and houses jostle each other. Some of the modern city suburbs, with two and three family houses built of wood on small lots, are perfect fire traps. It is all wrong to put up wooden buildings having a height of 25 to 30 feet, and place them only about twenty feet apart.

No matter how neat and artistic such dwellings may be, such a collection seems like a mushroom growth. Its obvious flimsiness offends the eye. Once a fire gets started on a windy day, even an efficient fire department is helpless, and a whole neighborhood may be laid low. A wooden building suggests country or suburban life, and it needs space around it to look well. If you must build close to your neighbor, make it of brick or concrete. It won't cost much more, and the insurance man will smile on you.

Municipalities are too lax in allowing the conditions referred to. Probably the real estate dealers have too much political influence. If thickly crowded wooden buildings are to be permitted, the least that should be required is fireproof roofing.

The excuse is often made that a town cannot grow unless it has cheap rents, and that it would not have cheap rents if building was strictly regulated. If people were willing to walk a little further to their work, which would improve their health, they could get cheap land and low rents in the outskirts of almost any town. The cost of insurance is a factor in the rent bill.

SHAKESPEARE PLAYS.

The 300th anniversary of William Shakespeare's death, variously placed by historians from Feb. 23 to April 23, 1616, is being widely observed by literary clubs. But few theaters are celebrating the event by any Shakespearean revival.

While these plays deal with basic passions of human nature, and are as vital today as when written, the average man likes to see things in a modern setting. He wants war plays, crime plays, graft plays, political plays, with 1916 slang and stage business. All else he classes under the glib and dreadful word, "History."

The great majority of people would rather see fifteen cheap shows for ten cents than one good one for $1.50. They double up with laughter over the comedian who twists his face up in crooked wrinkles and perpetrates jokes at least as ancient as the bard of old Stratford. A real exploration into the recesses of the human soul seems like too deep water.

Nevertheless, when the college and high school dramatic associations search for popular plays, they are very apt to select Shakespeare. It still draws the kind of people to whom they look for support, even if done amateurishly. These plays are still big sellers at the book stores, and are studied by thousands of clubs.

The critical demands of modern audiences place obstacles in the way of their production. Costumes must be gorgeous, harmonious in color, appropriate historically. The scenes must be artistically beautiful and imaginative and create illusion. This costs money.

Yet during recent years a number of good companies have performed Shakespeare simply, to good audiences, often out doors. They teach the public that the best of dramatic art is not in the clothes and the painted trees and rivers. Shakespeare may again flourish in this manner, and be seen even in remote rural circuits.

It would probably be possible to get appropriations for strategic military highways in this country if it were demonstrated that you could do fifty miles an hour on them without ditching the machine.

Employers are urged to allow their help to attend military camps. It is believed that they will patriotically respond by letting them off for this purpose on Sundays and legal holidays.

The agricultural colleges have thrilling athletic events in the line of egg laying contests, but the boys seem to prefer strictly classical institutions where they get thorough training in baseball.

Our statesmen are able to formulate their convictions on the submarine question much more clearly after counting noses among the different elements in their home districts.

After looking over the average state legislature, one comes to the conclusion that the trouble with representative government is that it represents.

One of the easiest ways to earn $25 is to write a magazine article with plans for a house supposed to cost $5,000 which actually will take $7,000.

The people on the Mexican border can't expect to get protection with so few congressional districts bordering on the line.

Gen. Carranza's soldiers are willing to participate in the pursuit of Villa by helping the Americans eat up their supplies.

The high price of gasoline may not restrict the use of automobiles, but it will reduce some savings bank accounts.

HELD AT MILTON COLLEGE
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Milton, April 6.—In the thirteenth annual oratorical contest of Milton College, at the college chapel, Tuesday evening, M. C. Buell, of Waukesha, won first prize in the ladies' division. Her oration, entitled "The Cradle of Dreams," was an argument for the better supervision of the cheap theatre, and the providing of a better "cradle of dreams" for the poor children of the city. Miss Beth Davis of Milton took second prize with an oration on an income tax, as the largest amount in the district. He purchased eighty acres of rocky land. Little of it was tillable and he produced it cheap because no one else wanted the property.

There Was Nothing So Good for Congestion and Colds as Mustard

But the old-fashioned mustard plaster burned and blistered while it acted. You can now get the relief and help that mustard plasters give without the plaster and without the blister.

MUSTEROLE does it. It is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. It is scientifically prepared, so that it works wonders, and yet does not blister the tenderest skin.

Just massage MUSTEROLE in with the finger-tips gently. See how quickly it brings relief—how speedily the pain disappears.

And there is nothing like MUSTEROLE for Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Tonsillitis, Croup, Stiff Neck, Asthma, Neuralgia, Headache, Congestion, Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Pains and Aches of Back or Joints, Sprains, Sore Muscles, Bruises, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Colds of the Chest (it often prevents Bronchitis).

At your druggist's, in 25c and 50c jars, and a special large hospital size for $2.50. Be sure you get the genuine MUSTEROLE. Refuse imitations—get what you ask for. The Musterole Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

his head—hopelessly, and his voice seemed lifeless. "It is a time of war. You must accept my word that I am honest with you."

She also shook her head and started again for the double doors. "Perhaps when you prove that to me—" He took an eager step toward her. "But, no, you can not. I will be sailing so soon, and—and you must forget."

"You ask the impossible!" Woodhouse quickly seized her hand and raised it to his lips. As he did so, the double doors opened noiselessly and Jaimir Khan stood between them, smilingly.

Jane, startled, withdrew her hand, and without a farewell glance, ran across the library and through the door to Lady Crandall's room. Jaimir Khan, with a cold glance at Woodhouse, moved silently to the door of General Crandall's room and knocked.

"It is I—Jaimir Khan," he announced in the muffled hall from within. "Yes, General Sahib, I will wait."

He turned and looked toward Woodhouse. The Indian had taken a cigarette from the pack and had seen him through Jane, and was turning it over in his hand curiously. The Indian, reading like a hunting cat, began lighting candles. His tour of the room brought him to the captain's side and there he stood, motionless until Woodhouse, with a start, observed him.

"Wonderful—wonderful!" Bishop turned in unfeigned enthusiasm to Woodhouse, behind him. "There is the power—and the pride—of England. Short of thrills a chap, eh?"

"Rather!" Woodhouse replied. "Well, must get down to the quay to receive any dispatches that may come ashore," the major exclaimed. "But, it gives me a little homesick tug at the heart to see these grim old dogs of war. They represent that right little island that rules the waves."

"Ah—London—London—the big, old town where they pull the strings that make us dance!" General Crandall, leaning against the window frame, his eyes on the incoming fleet, voiced the chronic nostalgia of the man in the service.

"The town for me!" Woodhouse exclaimed with fervor. "I'm sick for the sight of her—the sounds of her—her dances! Her! The orange peel and the asphalt and the gas coming in over Vauxhall Bridge."

Bishop turned on him admiringly. "By George, that does hit it off, old man—no mistake!"

Jane was out on the balcony now with field glasses she had picked up from the governor's desk. She called back through the curtains, summoning Woodhouse to come and pick out for the ship. When he had joined her, Bishop stepped quickly to his superior. "Sir?"

"What do you think, General? By George, it seems to me it would need an Englishman to give one that snaf of London this chap just got off."

"Exactly," the general caught him up crisply. "And an Englishman's done it—Rudyard Kipling. Any German who can read English can read Kipling."

"But, what do you think, General? That strikes me as genuine—that portrait of Lady Evelyn clenched things, I take it?"

"Confound it! We haven't absolutely proved anything pro or con," General Crandall grumbled, in perplexity. "Thing'll have to be decided by the Indians—what he finds, or doesn't find—in Woodhouse's room. Let you know soon as I bear."

Bishop hurried to make his adieux to Lady Crandall and her guest, and was starting for the doors when Woodhouse, stepping in from the balcony, offered to join him. The governor stopped him.

"By the way, Captain, if you'll wait for me a minute I should like your company down the Rock."

Bishop had gone, and the general, taking Woodhouse's agreement for granted, also left the room.

Woodhouse, suddenly throw back on his guard, could find nothing to do but assent. But when Lady Crandall excused herself on the score of having to dress for dinner, he welcomed compensation in being alone with the girl who had gone with him steadfastly, unflinchingly, through the curtains, stood before the balcony, hesitantly meditating flight. To her Woodhouse went, in his eyes an appeal for a moment alone which would not be denied.

"You were—very kind to me," he began, his voice very low and broken. "If it had not been—for your help, I would have—

"I could not see you—see you grope blindly—and fall!" She turned her head to look back through the opened glass doors to the swiftly moving dots in the distance that represented the ongoing battle fleet.

"But we're there no other reason except just humanity to prompt you? He had possessed himself of one of her hands now, and his eyes compelled her to turn her own to meet their gaze. "Once when they were trying to trip me, I caught a look from your eyes, and—and it was more than pity."

"You are presuming too much," the girl panted faintly; but Woodhouse would not be rebuffed.

"I won't hear me," he rushed on impulsively. "This is a strange time for me to say, but you say you are going—going away soon. May not have another opportunity—hear me! I am terribly in earnest when I tell you I love you—love you beyond all believing. No, no! Not for what you have done for me, but for what you are to me—beloved."

She quickly pulled her hand free from his grasp and tried to move to the door. He blocked her way.

"I can not have you go without a word from you," he pleaded. "Just a word, that's all I say."

"How can you expect—that—I know what I do—" She was groaning blindly, but persisted: "You, who have deceived others, are deceiving them now—how can I know you are not deceiving me, too?"

"I can not explain." He dropped

CHAPTER XVI

The Pendulum of Fate

The next day, Thursday, was one of hectic excitement for Gibraltar. Focus of the concentrated attention of town and Rock was the battle fleet, closing in on the inner harbor which had been a gray lake of indistinctness since the standing walls of a submerged Atlantis, lay close to the quays, barges lashed alongside the folded booms of their torpedo nets. Behind them, battle cruisers and scouts formed the protecting cordon. Far out across the entrance to the harbor, the dark, black shapes of destroyers on constant guard were shuttles trailing their threads of smoke through the blue web of sea and sky. Between the fleet and shore, another epoch of launching established lines of communication: khaki of the Rock's defenders and blue of the fleet's officers' men, passed, and repassed. In wardroom and club lounge glasses were touched in pledges to the united service.

The high commander of the Mediterranean fleet paid his official visit to the governor of Gibraltar, and the governor, in turn, was received with honors upon the quarterdeck of the flagship. But under the superficial courtesy, the former and the latter, the stern business of war was progressing at high tension.

It was necessary that all of the fighting machines have their bunkers filled by noon of the following day.

Every minute that the Channel lay under the murky North Sea fogs lay without full strength of her fleet protection was added danger for England.

That morning, Captain Woodhouse went on duty in the signal tower. Major Bishop, his superior, had summoned him to his office immediately after breakfast and assigned him to his tasks there. Sufficiently preoccupied, he had come through the fire in General Crandall's library, teetered and found genuine. Through this pretext and that, he had been kept off the day before denied access to the slender stone tower high up on the Rock's crest which was the motor center of Gibraltar's ganglia of defense.

The small office in which Woodhouse was installed was situated at the very top of the tower and glassed on four sides like the lantern room of a lighthouse, and provided with telescope, a telephone, switchboard, range finders, and all the complicated machinery of gun-fire control. On one side were trestle boards supporting charts of the ranges—figures representing every square yard of water from the nearer harbor to the farthest reaching distance of the number of disappearing guns. A second graphic sheet showed the harbor and anchorage and the traces to the straits; this map was thickly spotted with little, red, numbered dots—the mines. Sown like a minefield with these deadly capsules of destruction, were all the waters about; their delicate tendrils led under water and through conduits in the rock up to this slender spire of the signal tower. As he climbed the winding staircase to his newly assigned post, Woodhouse was surprised to see the night of Lady Crandall's pink face was glowing with humor. "To Consul Reynolds, who swore he would have to pay for thus neglecting his consulate for so much as two hours, had fallen the honor of escorting Mrs. Sherman to table. Willy Kimball, polished as to shirt bosom and sleek hair, had eyes and ears for none but the blithe Kitty. Next to General Crandall sat Jane Gerson, radiant in a tattered gown of trick gauze overlaid on silk. At her side was Captain Woodhouse in his proper uniform dinner coat faced with red and gold. Of the whole company, Woodhouse alone appeared constrained. The girl by his side had been cool in her greeting that evening; to his conversational salutes she had answered with indifference, and now at table she divided her favors between General Crandall and the partly little consul across the table. It seemed to Woodhouse that she pursued with a lash of cruelty to her joy at the approaching departure on the morrow.

"Oh, you must all listen to this!" Kitty Sherman commanded the attention of the table with a clapping of hands. "Go ahead, Willy; he had the funniest accident—tell them about it."

Young Kimball looked conscious and began to stammer.

"You're getting us all excited, Willy." Henry J. boomed from the opposite side of the table. "What happened?"

"Why—ah—really quite ridiculous, I know. Hardly matter to ah—talk about." Willy fumbled the rose in the lapel of his jacket and searched for words. "You see, this morning I was thinking very hard about what I would do when I got back to Keweenaw. Quite enthusiastic, I am about the little town now—and I well mean to say, I got into my bath with my wrist watch on."

Shouts of laughter added to the youth's confusion. Sherman leaned far across the table and advised him in a hoarse whisper:

"Buy a dollar Ingersoll, Willy. It floats!"

"Well, you might give him one of yours, father." Kitty put in, in quick defense. "Anybody who'd carry two watches around—"

"Two watches?" Lady Crandall was interested.

"Could you do anything with a bayonet, my man?"

"I could fry a rasher of bacon on it, sir," the beggar answered.

"That boy of mine is always asking questions."

"Oh, well, perhaps he wants to learn something."

"Maybe so, but his inquisitiveness is rather distressing to me at times."

PACKERS IN EFFORT TO FORESTALL PROBE

Offer to Furnish Government Information Regarding Their Business Falls to Satisfy Investigators.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE) Washington, April 6.—Efforts of the Chicago packers to forestall an investigation of charges that they control the live stock markets of the country by offering to furnish information to the department of agriculture concerning all phases of their business have failed in the approval of either the department or the cattle raisers and feeders.

This became known at a hearing held by the house judiciary committee on a resolution introduced by Congressman Borland of Missouri, directing the federal commission to make an investigation of the charges that the packers monopolize the live stock markets, and, while boosting prices to the consumers of their products, force down the prices they pay for beef cattle.

Walter L. Fisher of Chicago, representing the American National Live Stock association, rejected the offer of the packers.

Cattle Lower; Meat Higher.

"In spite of the abnormal demand for beef in 1915, due to the war, the packers got less than before," said Mr. Fisher. "They have to write the figures and reasons assigned by the packers for this condition. They are not being analyzed and nobody knows just what the profits of the packing business are or that the price to the cattle raiser or that charged to the consumer is fair. There is growing discontent at such conditions."

Mr. Fisher said the live stock associations were not much interested in criminal prosecutions as they were in having a complete economic study made of the entire beef industry. This would determine every element of cost that goes into the production and whether unfair profits are being taken out by the packers; also how complete the control of the beef industry by the five big packing concerns is, and what regular laws are needed to meet the situation.

Borland Tells of Complaints.

Mr. Borland in his statement said he had received numerous complaints from his constituents to the effect that the packers go into the country to bid on stock.

"In practicing this method," he said, "the packers are killing the exchanges and getting open bids, while the commission men are being driven out of business.

"If they continue this practice there will ultimately be only one buyer for the cattle. The packers follow the cattle from market to market."

He stated that cattle today are $1.60 higher than on Feb. 15.

"The foreign demand should have advanced the price of beef in 1915, but did not, and yet the packers have made an arbitrary advance in the last five weeks. The entire west is controlled by five packing houses, who own the refrigerator cars, the stock yards, terminals and switching privileges. They control the price and dictate terms of business."

MISS G. E. YOUNG.

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT.

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

(By Allen B. West.)

Question: I am thinking of raising an acre of stock beets for hogs and cows to supplement my silo. Will it be advisable?

Answer: You will gain nothing by it. Many experiments have been conducted to show the cost and yields of roots and corn silage. When the quantities of dry matter harvested in the crop are considered the corn is much as the ordinary root crop.

The cost of an acre of beets when stored amounts to about $56, and corn in the silo about $21. That means half the quantity of food material at double the cost.

Question: Can I use small potatoes for seed, or potatoes that are sunburned?

Answer: Small potatoes are not likely to produce a desirable crop. Potatoes for planting should be selected with the same care that one exercises in saving other seed. They should be selected in the field when the potatoes are dug, from hills that have borne a good number of potatoes of the right shape and size. Using small potatoes year after year for seed is likely to cause deterioration.

After disinfecting plant on clean soil; a clover sod is best, but any green crop turned under is helpful. Cook scabby potatoes before feeding stock and do not use fresh manure on potato land. Do not apply lime or ashes on potato soil. Rotate potatoes with other crops and if scab develops do not grow potatoes again on that soil for five years or more.
